

Understanding and Responding to Self Harm and Suicide in Youth—A Developmental Perspective

Wednesday 6th December, or

Thursday 7th December

Self-harm and suicide are major issues amongst young people. Both issues need to be taken extremely seriously. There are a lot of myths about both topics that prevent many people from getting the help they need. This evidence based, best practice workshop will empower you to help a young person who is self-harming or suicidal.

Join us for this workshop where you will learn:

- What the difference is between suicide and self harm.
- What is self-harm and why people do it.
- What is the best way to help someone with a mental illness.
- Where can you go to find help.
- Are they just “seeking attention?”
- We will also address common myths and misconceptions.
